

New SAT Essay Practice: Advanced Practice for the Redesigned SAT Essay

The New SAT Essay is a redesigned version of the SAT essay that was introduced in 2016. It is a 50-minute essay that requires students to analyze a given passage and then write an essay in response to it. The essay is scored on a scale of 2-8, with 8 being the highest score.

The New SAT Essay is different from the old SAT essay in a number of ways. First, the New SAT Essay is no longer an optional essay. All students who take the SAT are required to write the essay. Second, the New SAT Essay is shorter than the old SAT essay. The old SAT essay was 650 words long, while the New SAT Essay is only 500 words long. Third, the New SAT Essay is more focused on analysis than on personal experience. The old SAT essay allowed students to write about a personal experience, but the New SAT Essay requires students to analyze a given passage and then write an essay in response to it.

The following is an excerpt from a speech given by President Barack Obama on race relations in the United States:

> "Race matters. It matters that we are one people, a people of every race and every creed, bound together by a common destiny. But race also matters because it shapes our experiences and our opportunities in ways that are both subtle and profound. We know that, as a nation, we have come a long way since the days of slavery and Jim Crow. But we also know that there is still work to be done."

Essay:

In his speech, President Obama acknowledges that race matters in the United States. He argues that race shapes our experiences and opportunities in ways that are both subtle and profound. Obama's argument is supported by a wealth of evidence, including the fact that people of color are more likely to live in poverty, to be incarcerated, and to be victims of violence than white people.

Obama's argument is also supported by the experiences of many Americans. For example, a study by the Pew Research Center found that black Americans are more likely than white Americans to say that they have been treated unfairly because of their race. Additionally, a study by the National Urban League found that black Americans are more likely than white Americans to say that they have been stopped by the police for no reason.

Obama's argument is important because it reminds us that race continues to play a significant role in American society. We must not be complacent in our efforts to achieve racial equality. We must continue to work to create a more just and equitable society for all Americans.

The following is an excerpt from an article by the New York Times on the impact of social media on teenagers:

> "Social media has become an increasingly important part of the lives of teenagers. It allows them to stay connected with friends and family, to share their thoughts and experiences, and to learn about the world around them. However, there is also growing concern about the negative effects of social media on teenagers. Some studies have shown that social media use can lead to increased anxiety, depression, and loneliness."

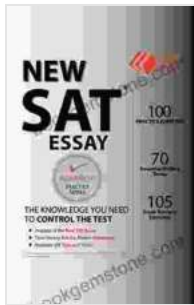

Essay:

Social media is bad for teenagers. It makes them anxious, depressed, and lonely. I know this because I have seen it firsthand. My friends are always on their phones, and they are always posting about their lives. It makes me feel like I am missing out. I also feel like I am constantly being compared to others, and it makes me feel bad about myself.

Social media is also a waste of time. Teenagers should be spending their time on more productive things, like studying or spending time with their friends and family. Instead, they are wasting their time on social media.

I think that teenagers should be banned from using social media. It is not good for them. It is making them anxious, depressed, and lonely. It is also a waste of time.
